

Merry Christmas!

December is the last month of the year when we enjoy Christmas with cold weather. Lights and happiness everywhere, sweetness in heart and love for everyone! This month marks the birth of Lord Jesus, God's son bringing hopes and joy in every eye.

The last quarter's issue is before you.

The issue for the researcher shares knowledge from the fields of Science & technology, Commerce, Law and Banking.

Short fiction will keep the readers entertaining. Poetry, Book Review and India in Translation is the regular feature.

Our special thanks to all the contributors for bring vivacity to the issue. Their continuous support helps us in fulfilling our commitment of presenting this e-zine on time. I am grateful to Mark Cornell for his contribution in the form of short fiction in every issue. I am also glad to have young writer introduced to episteme, Mr. Nishant Khatri. We welcome him to this aesthetic journey of Episteme.

I express my gratitude to our management and patron, also obliged to our review team for their continuous support. We would be happy to receive suggestions from you for making E-Zine better every time.

At the end I take this opportunity to wish everyone here a very Happy and Prosperous 2019. Let us share more love and happiness and spread it to masses and hatred goes of the world to find New Earth.

Happy Reading!
