

EDITORIAL

It is a great pleasure announcing the launch of the current (twelfth) issue of this trans-national, multi-disciplinary peer-reviewed international online journal “Episteme”.

The current issue has got contributions from five countries. The literary section is enriched with the contributions of Rob Harle, a very distinguished poet from Australia and Louis Kasatkin from London along with Indian poet VivekanandJha.

The column India in-translation includes translations of original Hindi poems of Santosh Alex in addition to his own contribution. Memoirs by a tri-lingual writer V.G. Nandalong with short stories and essay caters to the needs of the diversified readers.

The edition travels through time with articles on manusmriti adding to our ancient cultural knowledge while the articles on Jan DhanYojana relates to the initiative taken by the present government. Apart from these articles, other research related to banking sector, entrepreneurship, ethics, consumer behavior are also included.

My column will not be completed without expressing my heartfelt gratitude to Dr. Sunil Sharma, the patron and management for their encouragement and whole-hearted support. Special thanks to all our valued contributors across the globe for supporting this intellectual endeavor by sharing their contributions. Our contributors and readers are kindly requested to communicate their feedback and suggestions for improvisation of our further issues.

Happy Reading!

Savita Punjabi