

EDITORIAL

Here is the 13th issue of the trans-national, multi-disciplinary, peer-reviewed online journal Episteme.

The current issue is the poetry special with different sections on diasporic, national and international verses. Overall there are eight nations represented through their distinguished authors; apart from that the usual columns like India-in-translation, Writer in Spotlight and a Literary Interview that are other important highlights.

The contributions by the renowned writers like UK-based Dr. Debjani Chatterjee, Durlabh Singh and Mona Dash, Usha Kishore, Bashabi Fraser from Scotland, Mukesh Williams from Japan and Jawaid Danish from Canada have enriched it further.

Irish poet Gene Barry is featured in a new column Ireland through its Poetry.

Short fiction and book review and preview are also included.

The research articles provide inter-disciplinary approaches to the social issues like cybercrimes, home loans and Information technology and human rights.

I express my gratitude to the management and Dr. Sunil Sharma, principal and patron. I also appreciate the contributions made by all the writers for this modest venture by our college.

Happy Reading!

Savita Punjabi