

AN UNBORN'S TALK

Savita Punjabi

The world is so beautiful, shiny with cool weather.

I am your own foetus, can you hear me mother

I know you love me, expecting me to be a boy.

one hint about my female sex, you will abort me, why??

Don't I have right to open my eyes, and watch the beautiful world.

Don't you love me just because; I have girl baby face, hair curled.

Boy child may shun you, when he is grown up.

I guarantee you life time support, just let me be born and brought up.

Mother hugs the child when, he is afraid.

I also need you, as fear, of abortion makes me red.

The feeling in your mind is my up spoken request.

Hear it and give me birth, as i will turn up to be the best.

Thus, to conclude.....

"We need to create new narratives which combat the destructive effects of gender and discrimination in our society."

Gender discrimination and stereotyping diminish all people.

Episteme: an online interdisciplinary, multidisciplinary & multi-cultural journal

Bharat College of Commerce, Badlapur, MMR, India

Volume 2, Issue 1

June 2013

Bio:

Savita Punjabi is an Ulhasnagar- based poet. She is an Assistant Professor in Bharat College of Commerce, Badlapur.