

AWAKENING AND OTHER POEM

By Lara Ayvazyan

The word "love" was deceived,
Tore to holes, to tear.
And any creator of the art
Can write a lot of lies.

Not having felt hunger and dryness,
He will scowl with an arrogant brow.
Ah, "fisherman of human souls,"
What do you know about love?

About love, where two would embrace,
About love, that is universal, great,
What allies on earth all human being,
It stops conflicts with enmity.

And for the theme of love to watch
Train to magazines and movies.
Yes, once they knew how to love,
And today we do not care.

We grumble more, time abusing,
And the ardor of that criticism prove it is worth,
But no one will ever know:
How she loved, and how he loved.

This feeling is so tender, gentle,

A rare gift is to save it...
It is like a spring flower snowdrop,
What cannot be trampled or torn!

FIREBIRD

Scrolling another page
Life that passed easily,
You seem like an overseas bird,
Soaring too high.

You are not a pigeon, not a titmouse
And not the gliding seagull.
Multi-colored firebird
Straightened two wings.

They hid the house, the family,
Embracing and pressing to her chest.
Everything is beautiful that was,
But not worse - ahead!

I do not remember you in black,
This color is not for you
The color of the night cannot help you,
You prefer the palette of the day.

Red, yellow, blue,
Colors of the sun and fire,

Are forever friendly with you

Keeping your warmth!
